Context and objectives

The Eastern Partnership (EaP) was founded in 2009 by the European Union (EU) to strengthen its relations with interested partner countries (Armenia, Azerbaijan, Belarus, Georgia, Moldova, and Ukraine) and promote regional stability through trade agreements and democratic institution-building. But almost ten years of EaP have only produced mixed results, regardless of the growing interest shown by some partners for this policy framework. Human security, all in all, has hardly improved in most parts of the EU's Eastern neighbourhood. And dividing lines running across a region targeted by competing regional integration projects have not helped to strengthen European security.

In cooperation and with the support of

These limitations, which have been tentatively addressed by a growing emphasis put on resilience, differentiation and joint ownership, have questioned the adequacy of the EaP in times of geopolitical turmoil. But the challenge faced by the EU in advancing a more effective EaP is not only external, to be derived from specific political contexts in the Eastern neighbourhood. It is also internal to the EU.

Almost ten years after the inception of the EaP, the member states of the EU still share relatively different views as for raison d'être, importance and/or finalité of the EaP. This plurality of views undermining the strategic character of the EaP is embedded in the politics of the EU's external action in its Eastern neighbourhood. In the near future, the EU's reform agenda, upcoming negotiations on the multiannual financial framework, Brexit, European elections and other internal affairs will continue to capture the attention and mobilise the energy of the member states and EU institutions. They will possibly limit the advancement of a more integrated and strategic EaP approach to European security.

Organised in the framework of the Austrian Presidency of the Council of the European Union, this interactive event will discuss the politics of the Eastern partnership in the current wider European context, beyond the sheer agenda of the next EaP Summit:

- How successful has the EaP been in promoting regional stability and human security over the last decade?
- How to ensure a greater consistency between the advancement of the EaP as policy framework at the service of European security and the interwoven variety of political interests underpinning the EaP?
- What should be changed in the EaP to increase joint-ownership at the political -rather than institutional- level?
- How much linked are the EU's internal reform agenda and the advancement of the EaP?
- What can we expect from the next EaP Summit?

This event builds on the Eastern Partnership Reflection Forum, an initiative launched in Minsk in 2017 by a pan-European network of think-tanks. Its aim is to advance an inclusive, pan-European reflection at the strategic level and with a policy-oriented focus on the Eastern Partnership and encourage synergies across research institutions and national and European administrations. This Vienna Reflection Forum will pave the way for the third Eastern Partnership Reflection Forum, planned for autumn 2019 in Chisinau.

Format, participation and output

The main event will gather international researchers as well as a policy advisors and representatives from key regional institutions and national administrations around a large hollow-square table (no panel-style configuration). The format of discussion will foster interactive exchanges among all the participants rather than ex cathedra presentations. The Chatham Rules will apply, and participation will only be possible upon invitation. The public event will feature a panel of experts/officials in a more traditional conference setting.

29 October 2018, 18h00-20h10 - Public Roundtable

Unity and disunity in wider Europe: New approaches to European cooperation and integration?

The European Union, the Western Balkans and the Eastern Partners in wider Europe

Venue: Diplomatische Akademie Wien, Favoritenstraße 15a, Vienna

The European Union, its Eastern partners and the Western Balkans all share a vital interest in ensuring peace and comprehensive security in Europe as a primary condition for their stability, prosperity and development. To advance this shared interest, the EU relies on different sets of external policies promoting cooperation and / or integration in wider Europe, regardless of the finalité of the process. From Tbilisi to Pristina, from Minsk to Belgrade, the challenges faced by the EU and its partners are very different. But they also show a number of commonalities. Almost thirty years after the Charter of Paris for a new Europe and in the context of Brexit, the challenge of unity, integration and cooperation in wider Europe remains more topical than ever. This public roundtable, building on both the “Eastern Partnership Reflection Forum” and “Western Balkans Reflection Forum” initiatives, will seek to advance a wider, strategic reflection on the EU’s external approach across its neighbourhoods. How much commonality is there in the EU’s approach towards its Eastern and Western Balkan partners? What can the EU achieve in its changing neighbourhoods, considering its internal fragilities? What is at stake for the EU in the wider geopolitical context? What lessons can be drawn from the EU’s experience in both fields?

- Thomas Buchsbaum, Special Envoy on Eastern Partnership, Austrian Federal Ministry for Europe, Integration and Foreign Affairs, Vienna

9h25: Shaping a more strategic policy: the EaP from the point of view of EU capitals

France, Austria, Germany, the V4, Sweden, the Baltics and the other member states of the European Union have non-identical views of the EaP, its raison d'être, its importance relative to other EU policies and / or its finalité. With the re-nationalisation of common approaches, which has intensified over the past few years against the backdrop of a series of internal crisis, national politics is likely to play an increasing role in shaping EU external policies. How convergent/ divergent are the approaches of the Member States in EaP matters? How significant are EU internal challenges to the development of the EaP? And how to strengthen the internal cohesion of the EaP approach with respect to its raison d'être, importance relative to other EU policies and / or its finalité?

Facilitators: Sandra Fernandes, Assistant Professor, Research Centre in Policital Science/ University of Minho, Braga

Florent Marciacq, Deputy Secretary General and Research Fellow, Austro-French Centre for Rapprochement in Europe, Vienna; Senior Fellow, Centre international de formation européenne, Nice/Berlin

11h00: Coffee break

11h15: Keynote

- Alexandra Dienes, Research Associate, Friedrich-Ebert-Foundation, Regional Office for Cooperation and Peace in Europe, Vienna

11h25: Getting out from the in-between: the EaP in its geopolitical context

The EaP faces a number of important challenges in its wider context. Russia's relations with the West are in deep turmoil. Negative-sum games set the scene of a new regional order benefiting none of the parties, while EaP countries remain to varying degrees unstable, unreformed, and rife with conflict. Also, trade liberalisation and neo-regionalism could lead to more political competition, while infrastructure connectivity seeks to reshuffle patterns of trade. Interactions between the Eurasian Economic Union and the EU will be of great interest here. Meanwhile, international terrorism and criminality will remain a collective challenge, but ways to address it may be harder to be found. How much room for cooperation is there between the EaP and other regional integration/ cooperation projects following the Ukrainian crisis (EAEU, OSCE, etc...), and what can be done to increase the contribution of the EaP to European (rather than solely EU) security? What are "islands of cooperation" the EU and other actors in the region should seek to advance?

Facilitators: Hannes Meissner, Senior Researcher, Competence Center for Black Sea Region Studies, University of Applied Sciences BFI Vienna
Simon Weiss, Research Associate, Friedrich-Ebert-Foundation, Regional Office for Cooperation and Peace in Europe, Vienna

13h00: Networking and lunch break

14h15: Keynote

- Rebecca Harms, Member of the European Parliament, Chair of the EuroNest Parliamentary Assembly

14h25: The challenge of joint ownership: the EaP from the point of view of EaP countries

Belarus, Azerbaijan, Moldova and the other Eastern partners similarly hold very different expectations from the EaP at the political, economic and security levels. While some partners consider the EaP as a first tacit step towards pre-accession, others worry about the compatibility of the framework with their multi-vector foreign policy or relationship with Russia. How "regional" or conducive to regional cooperation can the EaP approach be in this highly differentiated context? What is the unused potential, if any, of the multilateral track? How much differentiated can the EaP become to actually achieve joint-ownership (EaP2+1, EaP3, EaP6, etc...)? How can it respond to individual needs, when those needs exceed the EU's ambitions or ability (accession perspectives, conflict resolution, etc...)?

Facilitators: Iulian Groza, Executive Director, Institute for European Policies and Reforms, Chisinau
Velina Tchakarova, Head of the Austrian Institute for European and Security Policy, Vienna
