Context and objectives

The manifold crises that have affected the European Union in the past ten years have strained the ambition of an ever-closer Union playing a leading role in global politics. After the economic and migration crises, Brexit and rising instability in the EU's neighbourhood, the EU is now confronted with an unprecedented pandemic and the return of geopolitics. The need for concerted action guided by a common vision is as pressing as ever. The Conference on the Future of Europe is accordingly intended to reinforce the Union in its plurality of perspectives.

The objective of this series of four Webinars is to shed light on perspectives from Central Europe; to examine, more specifically, how the Czech Republic, Hungary, Poland and Slovakia view the role of the Visegrad Four in tomorrow's Europe and how their visions for the future of Europe intersect with French and Austrian perspectives in a post-pandemic world.

The second webinar is devoted to the Czech expectations for the Future of Europe Conference. It will shed special light on the impact of the pandemic and the economic situation in the EU and especially the Visegrad Four. The Recovery Fund and its challenges and possibilities for a stronger, more resilient and united EU will be in the center of the discussions.
